

search this site.

July 1, 2008 - 7:34PM

Tempe police dog dies in line of duty

Comments 17 | Recommend 7

John Leptich, Tribune

Baloo, a member of the Tempe Police Department canine unit, died Tuesday from a broken spine and other injuries suffered during a fall in the line of duty.

Baloo, who had been with the department since November 2004, died a day after falling from a condominium roof while searching for two men police believe broke into a fenced construction site.

The 5-year-old German shepherd and his handler, officer John Holdinsky, responded to a suspicious activity call at 6:30 p.m. Monday at the Farmer Street Lofts Project, 450 S. Farmer Ave. Police were told the men might be hiding inside the building; police thought they might have been trying to steal copper.

Holdinsky and Baloo were on top of a new condominium when the dog didn't navigate the roof correctly, according to Brandon Banks, a Tempe police spokesman.

Banks added that Baloo fell approximately 40 feet and was rushed to Chandler Animal Hospital, where he was treated for injuries and died at 2:15 a.m. Tuesday. Banks said police found Baloo on his stomach, paralyzed with a broken spine and likely internal bleeding and broken bones.

"Not only was this a pet, but a partner," Banks said. "It's always hard."

Holdinsky has served the Tempe Police Department for 22 years. Baloo was a patrol-trained and narcotics-trained police dog. He cost the department $6,500 in 2004, according to police officials. His training, along with that of his handler, cost an additional $20,000, police said.

Police didn't find the men they think broke into the site.

Related

Home

Local News

Tempe

More Tempe News

Tempe plans spectacular fireworks display

Laurie Notaro signs 'Idiot Girl' book in...